WHAT THEY HATED.

An amusing incident occurred recently An amusing incident occurred recently in a smoking car of a train running between Shelby and Cleveland, Ohio. A woman accompanied by a poodle dog, entered the car just prior to the departure of the train from the former place, and, after depositing her dog on one sent, turned over the back of another one so that each faced the other. Together the and her canine companion thus moso that each faced the other. Together she and her canine companion thus monopolized two entire seats. Appearances seemed to indicate that she was not aware that the car was one exclusively for the convenience of those addicted to the use of the "weed;" but of this fact she was soon apprised by the conductor, who advised her to obtain a seat in another car, informing her at the same time that the accommodations in the way of seats in the other coaches were superior to those where she then the way of seats in the other coaches were superior to those where she then was. Hhwever, she insisted on remaining, urging that her presence would deter the occupants of the car from smoking and she would consequently expense no discomfort from the fumes of tobseco. Long before the train reached Clereland, however, a gentleman sitting directly in front of her produced his case, and taking therefrom a cigar, began puffing away at it in a manner which seemed peculiarly calculated to aggrivate seemed peculiarly calculated to aggrivate the strong-minded woman in front of him. In an instant, by a strategic movement, she wrested the obnoxious eigar from his mouth and threw it out of window, exclaiming:
"If there's anything I do hate, it's tobacco smoke.

tobacco smoke.

The passengers who had witnessed the affair were convulsed with laughter; but the offending smoker suppressed whatever emotions may have been struggling for expression in words or actions, and maintained throughout the same imperturbable gravitywhich had characterized him from the beginning.

Calmly rising from his seat he opened the car window next to him, fastened it was and reaching over into the next seat.

up, and reaching over into the next seat, took that waman's little poodle dog and threw him out of the window, as far as sible, at the same time exclaiming "If there's anything I do hate it's poodle dog."

The scene which followed beggars description. The car resounded with peal after peal of laughter, and as the extreme ludicrousness of the affair became apparent to the principal actors in it, they too joined with the rest. Despite the regret incident to the loss of her dog, the woman could not repress her incident to the lass of her dog, the dogs of the dogs of the affair.

PRESIDENT MacMahon's Ancestors.—
The MacMahons, are descended from Brian Boru, who was King of Ireland in 1014, and acquired great renown as the conqueror of the Danes, over whom he gained a decisive victory at Clontarf. A petition to King Louis is extant, wherein Maurice MacMahon, Knight of Malta, formily Captain of Cavalry in the regiment of Fitz James, states that he supplicates both for himself and for the Marquis d'Equilly and the Bishop of Killera, his brothers, that "he may be permitted to represent before all the princes that they draw their eternal paternal origin from the lords of Clondirala, in Ireland, who were descended from the lords and princes of Clare, who were issue of the ancient monarchs of Ireland. Their attachment to the Cathorine. were issue of the ancient monarchs of Ireland. Their attachment to the Catholic religion and to their legitimate prince having deprived them of their professions and titles, they find it impossible to establish their noble and ancient extraction by literal proofs. But they have proofs and testimonials beyond all suspicion, and admitted by the tribunals, which establish their nobility not only from the year 1400, but even up to Bran Born, monarch of Ireland, in the besigning of the eleventh century, and beginning of the eleventh century, and that they are of the same family as the Earls of Thomond;" whom the King had "honored with his favour." This document is accompanied by other papers from which it appears that the French MacMahons are descended from the two brothers, Maurice and John, who settled in France in the year 1760, the first of whom shared the fortunes of Prince Edward in Scotland, served in of Prince Edward in Sociand, served in the Spanish army, and afterwards was made captain in the French service; the second was created Marquis d'Equily, and admitted to the estates of Burgundy. The MacMahons were a fighting race, and their names frequently occur in the French military annals, sharing in the disasters as well as the glories which at-tend the French arms. At Waterloo one of them behaved with great gallantry. The battle was lost, but it was necessary to make a desperate effort to cover the to make a desperate effort to cover the retreat of the scattered army. "Charge, keep charging, boys," said MacMahon to the Third Cuirassiers. "Marshal," said the Colonel, "we are so cut up it is certain death for us to charge; you know it." "Embrace me, my friend," was MacMahons only reply, and then the two gallant soldiers led forward the regiment which made those three terrible charges that are recorded among the great deeds of the French army. Only 109 men of its number remained and of these all but eight were wounded.—N. Y. se all but eight were wounded. - N. Y.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.-The page humanitarians, remarks the Springfield Union, who advacate the abolition of capital punishment, are addicted to quoting mythical statistics form the ex-perience of Western States, as to the adperience of Western States, as to the advantages of imprisonment over the gallows as a check to murder. The United States census, however, has something to say on this subject which has a little more authority. In 1850 there were in this country 21 executions and 999 murders in a population of 31,443,321, and in 1870 there were 31 executions and 2,057 murders in a population of 38,925,598. When I murderer in each 10 was executed there was only 10 persons in a million murdered. When we executed 1 murderer in every 16, the murders rose million murdered. When we executed I murderer in every 16, the murders rose to 31 in a million, and when we executed I murderer in every 66, the number of murders was 53 in a million. These figures show that the smaller the proportion of executions to the number of murders, the larger the proportion of the murders to the population. We fear the advocates of the abolition of capital punishment will find this a very hard nut to crack. nut to erack.
